Linda Dodd-Major is an attorney providing strategic consulting for U.S. immigration matters pertaining to business, investment, employment, and training. She was nationally known for many years as creator and director of INS Office of Business Liaison, in which capacity she was responsible for developing public information to raise awareness and understanding of laws prohibiting illegal employment and obtaining international services in the U.S. as well as for regulations relating to employment eligibility verification and the Form I-9. At this time, she is a chief executive with Lookout Services, Inc., with which she helped to develop unique patent-pending rules-based software for I-9 compliance that is now available to the public. Ms. Dodd-Major’s expertise involves conversion of complex, interrelated laws, regulations, policies, and procedures into practical options for lay as well as legal communities. A popular national and international lecturer, she focuses on key interrelationships among the overlapping, intersecting, and interdependent jurisdictions of many U.S. government and other entities including the Departments of Homeland Security, Justice (Office of Special Counsel), State, Commerce, Labor, Treasury and Defense as well as the IRS and Social Security Administration. Ms. Dodd-Major holds advanced degrees in law and international business from Rutgers and Georgetown Universities.

Bruce Friedman is the Special Policy Counsel with the Office of the Special Counsel for Immigration Related Unfair Employment Practices, Civil Rights Division, U.S. Department of Justice. He has handled trials and appellate work for the Office, and currently specializes in immigrant civil rights law policy matters. Mr. Friedman also worked in the Civil Rights Division’s Disability Rights Section, which enforces the Americans with Disabilities Act. He supervised the Section’s investigation unit, and took part in pattern or practice litigation in District Court. Mr. Friedman is the coauthor of the book Religion in the Workplace, published by the American Bar Association in 1998. He has been a speaker at the Annual Meeting of the American Political Science Association. He recently published an article in the New York University Journal of Legislation and Public Policy, entitled “Advancing Civil Rights Through Immigration Law, One Step Forward, Two Steps Back?” Mr. Friedman received his law degree from the George Washington University School of Law, and was an editor on The George Washington Law Review. After graduating law school, he clerked for the Honorable Oscar H. Davis, United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit. Before joining government service, Mr. Friedman was an associate at Wilmer, Cutler & Pickering, in Washington, D.C.
